

<heading> Internships

<subheading> Research Internship at Migration and Asylum Project (November - December, 2025)

<body text> I interned at MAP under the Gender Equality Empowerment Team and Labour Migration and Mobility Team. These teams frequently receive clients who are victims of gender based abuse or labour law violations, respectively, which I assisted with.

The gender based abuse victims were mainly underprivileged women who were victims of domestic abuse, and lacked any support mechanisms to seek access to justice. During their intakes, I would note down all minute details of their story and then draft an initial legal petition. These intakes would often end up spanning multiple hours and become very emotional as these women shared the pain they had endured in their marriages. Although the legal process was slow-moving, the support from MAP empowered these women to take up roles as para-legal volunteers or connect them with other roles, such as beauticians and household helpers.

Apart from this, I also had the chance to help organise workshops and awareness drives, during which we assisted people living in the Adivasi Camp to register for documentation, such as birth certificates, vaccination certificates, Aadhaar cards, and school marksheets.

My experience at MAP was very integral to my understanding of how the system arranges itself in circles and mazes to inundate the working class. I saw firsthand the pains of persons struggling with court files, documentation, stamps, permissions and e-portals, and was motivated to help resolve even a small fraction of them.

<subheading> Research Internship at Part III (Part-time, August – October)

<body text> I interned online at Part III, Patna office. The project I was handling essentially worked with data collation from the reports of the State and District level committee reports that dealt with an analysis of the number of acquittals that happened in criminal cases, owing to reasons such as lack of evidence, absence of public prosecutor, absence of witnesses, or collation between parties.

There was a hypothesis that such acquittals due to procedural lapses were exceedingly common in crimes that fell under the SC/ST Atrocities Act, and therefore I was directed to compile the data of all acquittals that took place in a systemic manner to understand the patterns of such cases.

As this internship was online I was not able to interact with any persons whose cases I read or dealt with. However, most of the documentation was very lengthy and written in Hindi, which challenged my skills and made me very fluent in legal Hindi as well.

<subheading> Legal Internship in the Chambers of Sr. Adv. Yug Mohit Chaudhry (June – July 2025)

<body text> This was my first and only Law Chamber internship, and I am extremely grateful that it was under the extraordinary guidance of Senior Advocate Yug Mohit Chaudhry. His genuine knack and wisdom for criminal law seemed to have taught me years worth of nuance in a single month.

As Sr. Adv. Chaudhry only takes death penalty cases for mercy petitions, this internship required me to read through many case files that dealt with gruesome crimes. He taught me how to interpret evidence and understand where exactly the holes in the prosecution framings lie, and how the system of policing in India works almost only to arrest and harass the underprivileged. Even though I did not perform research or grassroots work in this internship, the practical experience of legal aid enabled me to understand access to justice from its very core.

Additionally, I also read a book given to me by Mr. Chaudhry called Begunaah Qaidi (Innocent Prisoner), about the lived experience of a school teacher who was wrongfully incarcerated for 9 years, with respect to the 2006 Mumbai Train Blasts. To my surprise, this book had been dedicated to Mr. Chaudhry as the author had been his erstwhile client. The book revealed many failures of the Indian police system, and also the targeted abuse meted out to minorities such as Muslims or Dalits.

<subheading> Legal Internship at Alternate Law Forum (November - December 2024)

<body text> My internship at ALF was very special, as this was the first time I became truly aware of the power of organising. Based out of Bengaluru, Alternative Law Forum is a legal practice and community-building organisation founded by Arvind Narrain.

During my time in ALF, I assisted with legal research and filing for multiple cases, including cases on domestic violence, land acquisition compensation, and parental abuse. Further I also drafted complaints on hate speech, an FAQ document on laws against sexual violence, and subsections for a PUCL report on reservations. In my last week, I made a research note on incidents under the Places of Worship Act.

I also created a database on UN resolutions on Israel-Palestine, and a Zero Hour Note for Parliament on labor deployment to Israel and humanitarian aid to Palestine. All this work was done in an environment that was incredibly motivating and encouraging. On weekends we attended protests and conclaves held in Freedom Park, Bengaluru regarding the Israeli occupation of Palestine.

This internship taught me how to use the skills I am taught at law school for real change, that I could see happen in front of my eyes. Being surrounded by people who felt the same burning need to help the community made me feel incredibly seen.

<subheading> Legal Internship at Jeevika, Centre for Civil Society (Part-time, August – December, 2024)

My internship with Jeevika was online. Jeevika is a program under CCS and also the name of their application, which seeks to address the routine harassment that municipality officials perform on street vendors.

During this internship, I drafted many petitions, and resolved cases for many street vendors whose goods such as pots, pans, or sellable items had been seized by the municipal officers. These officers also harassed these vendors on the basis of their authority and spoke to them brashly. I assisted these vendors in speaking to the municipal officers and in filing their complaints to the police as well.

The harsh treatment given to street vendors who were registered and performing their daily wage activities in a legal, regulated way taught me how those without land property are treated in the eyes of the law. While they are protected by law, the rough treatment given to them was what the ground reality of any municipal area looks like. This experience showed me how the unorganised workforce suffers the brunt of their occupation as well as systemic hurdles, creating a vicious cycle of poverty. The Jeevika app creates an SOS mechanism for such incidents and supports street vendors access justice.

<heading> Research Projects

<subheading> Case comment, “Union of India vs. Reliance Industries”, published in Journal of Unique Laws and Students Volume II Issue IV ISSN: 2583-1607

<subheading> Article titled “Fantasy And Feminism: The Preference For ‘Bad Boys’ In Literature”, Feminism in India blog.
(<https://feminisminindia.com/2025/03/20/fantasy-and-feminism-the-preference-for-bad-boys-in-literature/>)

<subheading> Coordinator, Vadiya Village Project, under the aegis of GNLU Centre for Women and Child Rights and Gender Resource Centre, Government of Gujarat (ongoing)

<subheading> Coordinator, ICC Handbook Project, under the aegis of GNLU Centre for Women and Child Rights and Gender Resource Centre, Government of Gujarat (ongoing)

<subheading> Coordinator, OHCHR Submission by GNLU Centre for Women and Child Rights on Historical and Contemporary Forms of Violations against Indigenous Women and Girls’ Reproductive Health and Rights (in press)

<heading> Positions of Responsibility

<subheading> Organiser, March for Women: Women at Work Conference 2026 on Women in the Informal Sector

This conference was held on 7th and 8th March 2026 and was focused on Women in the Informal Sectors of Employment. The three themes for panel discussions were domestic housework, sex work, and workplace safety for women. It was held in collaboration with the Gender Resource Centre, Government of Gujarat.

The experience of organising Women at Work was a labour of love, which took many, many months of sleepless nights and a brilliant team of highly charged students, ready to take it forward. It was made possible with the continuous support of our Faculty Head, Dr Asha Verma.

Seeing the conference come together was an illuminating experience, one that I will never forget. The diverse panel enabled an exchange of many new perspectives on gender and labour in India.

Interacting with our guest speakers after the sessions, however, would remain the most special part. As we all sat down for lunch or tea, there was so much discussion at every table that I was overcome with the possibilities for endless conversation. I managed my time somehow and enjoyed speaking to all the brilliant guests we had invited, and received their behind-the-scenes insights on the systemic hurdles that disadvantage women in the informal sectors in India.

<subheading> Convener, GNLU Centre for Women and Child Rights

I joined the Centre for Women and Child Rights in my first year, and in my fifth year, I am honoured to be heading the wonderful team of 76 students! I am extremely grateful to this Centre, which has acted as a springboard for me to explore all my passion projects.

(I am also extremely grateful for my dear friend Nidhi Suman, who held this position before me and taught me everything I could possibly learn.)

<subheading> Editor-in-Chief, Jury's Out Magazine

The Jury's Out Magazine is run by Suhani Srivastava and me. This magazine serves as a wonderful medium for engaging with pop culture, campus current events, and even politics and literature. I love my time as the EIC at Jury's Out, as it exposes me to so many brilliant minds on our editorial board and constantly inspires me to be cooler!

<subheading> Organiser, Read Reflect Resist: A Feminist Reading Circle

[redirect to section on feminist reading circle]

Initially ideated by my close friend and senior, Trisha Beria, the feminist reading circle is my favourite thing I do on campus. Read more about this here!

<subheading> Club Head, GNLU Quizzing Circuit

There are very few things I enjoy that are not related to politics or law, and quizzing is one of them. I realised my knack for quizzing in my second year, and since then, I have been devoted to it. There is a quiz hosted every Wednesday, and it is a part of my week that I really look forward to.